Improving Patient Outcomes with Real World Evidence

One year ago, the US FDA finalized its guidance on the use of electronic health records in clinical studies, to advance the use of RWE for regulatory decision-making. Over subsequent months, the agency launched a brace of initiatives, most crucially, their 2019 strategic Framework on the use of RWD and RWE.

Clinerion supports improving patient outcomes via real world evidence. To this end, we are partnering with Dresden International University to offer their Master's in Clinical Research students access to a subset of our real-world data.

The Eye of the Expert

Patient Centricity - what does it mean?

This month, we spoke with Keyla Deucher from BioServ SMO about Patient Centricity and real world evidence in Clinical Trials, and what this all really means practically in our daily jobs as Pharma professionals. We also asked YOU what Patient Centricity means to you: check out the [results on LinkedIn!]

"[...] Many clinical trials are performed in Brazil, but the way these trials are designed is based on the needs of European and American patients - which doesn't necessarily reflect the reality in Brazil."

Highlights from this Summer

In San Diego during DIA 2019, we ran the CISCRP 5K to support patient education.

Landmark events such as SCRS events (Taiwan, Australia) have led us to new potential partners.
